

As Times continues to be hard. Money is scarce. Collections are difficult. Business is dull. The hum of industry is but faintly heard. Our streets are filled with those who are either unemployed or have but partial employment. Work is sought by those who can not find it to do. The financial panacea, which was a Republican caucus measure of the last Congress, has proved a failure. It has done no good. It has not alleviated at all the public distress, but, so far as its effects can be judged, it has increased it. We see no hope for the people, no restoration of good times, until, by the result of a Presidential election, there can be a radical change in our political affairs. Our difficulties are political. The crops have been good. Nothing can be charged to the account of Nature for the stringency which affects the money market. While the masses are suffering the few who are in the Government rings are amassing large fortunes. They are coining money out of the blood and tears of the people. It would seem to be a bad time to offer Administration tickets to the workman, sustaining a policy which takes the bread from him and his family. —[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

Some Spiritualists in the Fifth Ward held a seance one night lately. Seated around a table they called up spirits and asked them questions. Among others was the question: "Is Beecher guilty?" In response to this there came three distinct raps. "Is Mrs. Tilton guilty?" was then asked, and instantly that table flopped over on its back and its drawers flew open.—[Denver Tribune.]

When Mary Ann's young man takes the baby on his knee, suddenly drops him without any warning, and sits cross-legged the rest of the evening, you may safely conclude that that young man was the victim of misplaced confidence.
